Republication

- Repeating a defamatory communication (“replication”) ordinarily constitutes publication for defamation purposes.
- But, the fair reporting privilege and the neutral reportage privilege are defenses for republishers.

Fair reporting privilege

- Common-law based.
- The media is privileged to provide a fair and accurate report of defamatory statements made in the course of legislative, judicial, administrative and other official proceedings/records, if:
 - The proceedings or records are open to the public, and
 - Relate to a matter of public concern

Limitations on the fair reporting privilege

- Common-law malice may defeat the privilege
- Must be “fair,” i.e., not distort the facts or omit important relevant facts that would change the reader/viewer’s perception
 - Media report should not carry a “greater sting” than the government-generated content.

- A report based on FBI documents not generally available to the public
 - Found to be privileged
- A newspaper reporter's accurate account of police statements to the press expressing doubt about the plaintiff's rape allegations
 - Found to be privileged

Privilege of neutral reportage

- First Amendment based.
- Privilege to fairly and accurately report newsworthy charges made by one public figure against another.
- Does not apply if reporter espouses the charge or distorts the statements in order to make a personal attack.
- Generally moot where reporter lacks malice (since regular First Amendment doctrine requires malice).

§230 safe harbor provides broad immunity against torts against site owners:

 - Defamation
 - Privacy torts
 - Outrage (IIED)
 - Nuisance
 - and more ...
- Even works with e-mail and other contexts outside the web.

Broad applicability

- "interactive computer service" means any information service, system, or access software provider that provides or enables computer access by multiple users to a computer server.
- Not limited to special kinds of websites. Includes blogs, Twitter, consumer review sites, etc.

Site operators shouldn't lose immunity by:

- Exercising traditional editorial functions, such as pre-screening, selectively deleting.
- Encouraging or paying third-parties for contributions.
- Editing material (unless the editing materially alter the meaning of the content).
