False Light

The Elements:

1. A public statement
2. Made with actual malice
3. Placing the plaintiff in
4. A false light
5. That is highly offensive to the reasonable person

False Light

Defenses:

- Essentially the same as for defamation
- So, for example:
  - A public figure will have to prove actual malice.*
  - A private figure, if a matter of public concern, must prove actual malice or negligence + special damages.*

*That is, if actual malice is not required as a prima facie element, which it generally, but not always, is.

Intrusion

The Elements:

1. Physical or other intrusion
2. Into a zone in which the plaintiff has a reasonable expectation of privacy
3. Which is highly offensive to the reasonable person

Disclosure

The Elements:

1. A public disclosure
2. Of private facts
3. That is highly offensive to the reasonable person

Some general notes about false light, disclosure, and outrage:

- They are available for natural, living persons only - not for corporations
- Much of defamation doctrine applies
  - Identification of plaintiff
  - Fact vs. opinion
  - Substantial truth (but not for disclosure)
- The First Amendment can substantially limit any of these torts
  - State action hurdle overcome a la NYT v. Sullivan
- § 230 applies
